

I just wanted you to know that I am a supporter and listener of the K-Love station (91.1 FM) in Denver, Colorado. This is the only adult contemporary Christian station in this market, and I know of a significant number of people like myself that would surely miss it if Low Power FM stations were to take over its frequency. K-Love allows the local market to use gaps between songs to broadcast event information that are happening in the Denver community. This is generally the best form of advertising that allows for many of these events to be financially feasible (because a greater number of people know of the event through the radio announcement).
